Historical Note

The Cooperative Baptist Fellowship (CBF) was organized in 1991 in Atlanta, Georgia, as a network of former Southern Baptists who believe in women in ministry and other historic Baptist principles. As of 2017, there are about one million members of CBF churches. The CBF headquarters is in Decatur, Georgia. Eighteen autonomous state and regional bodies have coordinators who work with the national body. Indiana is part of the North Central Region comprising ten states. The North Central group was among the first to organize in response to the Atlanta meeting in 1991. At the annual General Assembly, the CBF commissions field personnel, church starters, and chaplains. These national gatherings are held in June in various cities. The North Central Region holds yearly meetings in the spring.

Scope and Contents

This collection includes printed literature about the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship (CBF), the North Central Region of CBF, and Nikki Stoddard Schofield's speech given at her church. She spoke on Sunday evening, July 16, 2017, at Speedway Baptist Church, 2986 Moller Road, Speedway, Indiana, and told members about her experience in attending the General Assembly in Atlanta, Georgia, in June 2017. Nikki's speech is seven typed pages, covering June 28 to July 1, when she left Atlanta for Macon, Georgia. She was the only member of Speedway Baptist, which affiliates with CBF, to attend the annual conference. Her speech included highlights of the speakers in the general sessions as well as the workshops. On Friday, June 30, she told about meeting Rev. Mark McClintock, the new pastor of Speedway Baptist.
